Dear Sir:

I am currently an artist and a bridge (card game) professional, but my training as an engineer in the field of aerodynamics and computational fluid dynamics allows me to give you some insight into the climate hoax. Yes, it is a hoax and just another government boondoggle and possible source of kickbacks.

Yes, Roman Baber is correct in the debate to mention trees, but did you know there is no such thing as a greenhouse gas? The atmosphere has no glass ceiling. There is no greenhouse effect. If there is, we want it. A warm Earth would mean a longer growing season and less world hunger.

And if there were a greenhouse gas, why is water vapor not mentioned? Water is not only more abundant (infinitely so in comparison to CO₂), but it also has a huge absorption spectrum. Microwave ovens rely on this property.

We also want more CO₂ in the atmosphere. It is plant food, and our life on Earth depends on it. Greenhouse operators actually increase the levels of CO₂, so plants grow faster and stronger. Higher CO₂ levels also make plants drought resistant.

Question for you. If the Arctic completely melts, does sea level rise?

Answer: If floating ice melts (BTW the Arctic has less than 1% of the world's ice), sea level does not change. This is Archimedes principle.

Conclusion: It is embarrassing how little politicians pay attention to science and yet are the first to say, "We follow the science."

My father's book which I cowrote has even more science that is ignored by politicians. Cheap energy and wealth are possible through Albertan fossil fuels, but ignorance will lead us to poverty. The arrogance of humans to think they can control Mother Nature is absurd.

Please check out our book.

We (all humans) want cheap fossil fuels and a democratic government with no debt. Subsidies on useless green energy leads to corruption and at the very least wasteful spending. Green is obscene and is not green. Fossil fuels are green energy because CO₂ is produced, and CO₂ greens the Earth.

We have around 1,000 years of fossil fuels left to transition to another form of energy. Let's do it sensibly. The solution may even involve nuclear such as the Thorium reactor. A person, not yet born, may come up with the solution if not trapped by poverty and a leftist education system.

Can a person, trained to think CO₂ is a poison, come up with something intelligent? Who knows, but let's remove politics from science. That is the best we can do.
